why is Boca talking about CHELSEA KROST?

[] In March 2008, Krost, a senior at Spanish River High School, started a weekly radio show for teens by teens. "Teen Talk Live' is a forum where teens can find out how to help others—and themselves," she says.

[] The show, which airs on 1230AM WBZT (see wbzt.com for details) and streams online at teentalklive.net, is like "The View" for teens, says Krost. "Teens can talk about serious topics with other teens and professionals."

[] Krost, 17, also spreads her share of goodwill. She's volunteered at SOS Children's Villages in Coconut Creek and, in January, she will travel to Africa on behalf of Give a Girl a Chance, which assists victims of gender-based violence and women restricted by the societies in which they live.

[] In addition to applying to colleges this fall, Krost is seeking sponsors to syndicate "Teen Talk." Her dream? To become a television talk-show host.
